Do This!

By Kristin Granero

TONIGHT

A hunka hunka love

Elvis' birthday was Jan. 8, but that does not stop Glenside's Keswick Theatre from offering a tribute to "The King" at 8 tonight. The third annual Elvis Birthday Bash will feature two impressionists. Mike Albert is "Vegas superstar" Elvis, with a seven-piece band. He performs regularly with Elvis' own back-up singers, the Jordanaires, and has been featured in a half-dozen music videos, organizers said. Scot Bruce, with his rockin' tribute to the "young King," gives a '50s-era Elvis performance. Bruce also had a recurring role on Days of Our Lives. Tickets: $31.50 at <http://www.keswicktheatre.com/> or the box office (Keswick Ave., off Easton Rd.). Information: 215-572-7650.

TODAY

Take a wig to work

Today is Wear Your Wig to Work Day, and the wackier the topper the better, according to Mano/Damno, an interdisciplinary art group based in the Philadelphia area. You don't have to have a job to participate. The group organizes such events to make the public a participant in the arts rather than an observer.

SUNDAY

Tribute to Brown

The life of James Brown, the "Godfather of Soul," who died Christmas Day, will be celebrated at 7 p.m. Sunday at Dowling's Palace (1310 N. Broad St., near Thompson Street). Organizer Denise King describes this free event as an Ol' School Funk Party. Bring a flashlight to shine, and get down with such hits as "Jungle Boogie." And dig deep into your closet or run to the thrift store - bell bottoms, Afro wigs, Afro picks, dashikis, platform shoes, miniskirts, fishnet stockings, patent leather boots, peace signs and love beads are all welcome.
